The presentations were made on the subjects of Intelligence, Management, Model Police Stations in 2011 and role of Information Technology in Police in 2011.

The presentations were followed by wide range discussions on the subjects and various analytical and innovative ideas were exchanged.

During the deliberations, it was decided to set up 4 working groups in the following areas:-

- Intelligence;
- Force management and future requirements of Police stations;
- Information technology and modernization in Police; and
- Reviewing the dress pattern.

The commendations of the working Groups shall form the blueprint for future development of J&K Police so as to increase its professional competence and to move in tune with the emerging trends to fulfill its social obligations.

In his valedictory address, Sh. A.K. Suri, the DGP, J&K, said that the Police should at the outset, envision the challenges of tomorrow, reappraise its strengths and weaknesses so that it can stand up to the future challenges. He impressed upon the participants to perform the duties with integrity, diligence and impartiality. He advised the officers to maintain close contact with general public and police personnel under their command. "A Policeman should be forthcoming, sympathetic and a healer to the problems and grievances of the aggrieved but tough and uncompromising to the violators of law", the DGP added.
